General Approach	The Modern Language Association (MLA) provides a method for source documentation that is used in most humanities courses. The humanities place emphasis on authorship, so most MLA citation involves recording the author’s name in the physical text. The author’s name is also the first to appear in the “Works Cited” page at the end of an essay. The most recent MLA formatting can be found in the seventh edition of the MLA manual.	The American Psychological Association (APA) provides a method for source documentation that is used in most social sciences courses. The social sciences place emphasis on the date a work was created, so most APA citation involves recording the date of a particular work in the physical text. The date is usually placed immediately after the author’s name in the “References” page at the end of an essay. The most recent APA formatting can be found in the sixth edition of the APA manual.	The Chicago Manual of Style (CMS) includes two systems for citation: a notes and bibliography (NB) system and an author-date (AD) system. The NB system is used in most history courses. History places much emphasis on source origins, so footnotes and endnotes are used to demonstrate on-page where a particular piece of information came from. In CMS, a number is assigned to a particular fact in the text, and the correlating footnote or endnote will link the source to the text and to the bibliography. The most recent CMS formatting can be found in the sixteenth edition of the CMS manual.
Reference Lists	Occasionally truncated entries are given simply to focus on the differences between citations for each type of material. Ellipses indicate which entries would normally continue according to the basic principles of each style. Please see the OWL Research and Citation sections for more details.
Citing Books	Book citations in MLA generally require the author name, work title, publication city, publisher, year published, and an indication of the publication medium, such as print.	Book citations in APA generally require author name, publication year, work title, publication city, and publisher.	Book citations in CMS style generally require the author name, work title, publication city, publisher, and publication year.

Articles in Periodicals	Although periodicals are cited similarly to most book sources, MLA's seventh edition makes some distinctions specific to periodicals.	In APA periodical citation, authors are named by their last name followed by initials; the publication year goes between parentheses and is followed by a period. Only the first word and proper nouns are capitalized for article titles. Periodical titles are written in title case and followed by the volume number, which, with the title, is also italicized.	CMS periodical citations include author name, article title, publication title, publication date, and issue information. CMS also requires citation of a URL if the journal was accessed online.

Online Sources	MLA guidelines for most online sources were developed under the assumption that content can be found online as long as information, such as author and title, were included. Therefore, MLA does not require a URL listing. MLA citation of online sources does, however, ask for a publisher or sponsor of the webpage. Authors for websites are often corporations, or governments.	In APA citation, online sources often include what are known as DOIs, or digital object identifiers. If a DOI is available, it is used in place of a URL. The DOI is a serial number that identifies the source regardless of URL changes, and it can often be found on the first page of an online source. APA generally cites author, date, page title, site title, available page numbers, and a URL or DOI.	CMS citation requires the URL or DOI to be listed at the end of the citation but not the date the contented was accessed. If the internet source is time sensitive, include the date of access after the URL listing in parenthesis.

Multimedia Sources	MLA format for multimedia sources requires a medium description at the end of the citation. Film, DVD, radio, Web, a performance, and other descriptions should be used to indicate the type of multimedia referenced.	Electronic sources in APA format may include a digital object identifier (DOI) number. When a DOI is evident, it may be used in place of a URL address. An online source should include either a DOI or a URL.	When citing media sources in CMS format, include as much information as is available regarding author, producer, sponsor, publication, medium, dates, site title, and any available URL. An access date is not always needed in CMS formatting.
